

In January of 2004, my ears were saved from the overly-commercialized, dominating FM/AM Local Radio stations. I found XM Satellite Radio. XM provided me with the means and ways to listen to programming which appealed to myself and my specific tastes.

I had been looking into purchasing some form of Satellite Radio since September of 2003. But XM's announcement of Instant Traffic and Weather, gave me the extra push into a decisive movement of subscription. The charm: a nationally based satellite radio company, using modern globalization to its advantage enabling the delivery of a great spectrum of locally based content; which I would otherwise have to listen for on the local sub par FM/AM stations. I wholeheartedly believe the progress and direction XM pioneers, is a legitimate solution to the market dominated NAB's low quality, high commercial density programming.

To my knowledge, XM is not pursuing any illegal movements. Nor, is the NAB. Thus, it would be unconstitutional to prevent or inhibit the expansion of XM. Both XM and the NAB have entered a natural game of capitalized competition. This same fundamental is what gives every American the choices and freedoms they have come to love. Any governmental intervention would inhibit the process of the natural, American driven, economy.
